“ Tommy & Jessica,
We are so sorry of your loss. I really don't like using the word "loss", because when you loose something you don't know where it is. We KNOW where Aaron is. He is in such a peaceful, beautiful place that we can't even imagine. Please know that God is on your side and will be there for you. Lean on Him. He will get you through the darkest nights and the dimmest days. You and your family are in our thoughts and prayers. Please know that we are here for you.

“ Jbear and Tommy,

I know this is a time for grief. Anger, tears, confusion: it's all a part of it. Many relationships have fallen apart over the loss of a child. Please try to stay strong for each other. Now more than ever you need to be there for each other and not against one another. If you truly love each other, god will see you through this and after time you will be able to move on. We will never forget baby Aaron and even though we only had him for a short time he touched each and every one of our hearts in his own special way. Trust that God called him back because he saw the very good in him and wanted to save him from the turmoil and trials we all are here to go through. I know it is hard to believe and understand but Aaron is in such a better place and he is lucky. My little man will be something very special and someday we will know what that is and understand ourselves because God will show us in his own time. Right now we can be selfish in wanting him back for ourselves. We wanted to see him grow and learn to walk and talk and be the strong loving man I know he would have been. But for now he is at rest and in peace and as his grandmother I am thankful for that. I hope you can come to terms with that someday yourselves. For now, I am here for you and the kids in every way possible. Know that you can always call on and lean on mommy. I love you. To my baby girl, hugs and kisses are not enough. Keep your head held high Bear.
