“ When my mother passed earlier this year, Alycia was quick with a hug and she held on so tight. She didn’t care that I was crying and leaking on her shirt. Last Christmas she made me laugh so hard when she told my fiancé that he better take care of me or else. She cared so much for her whole family. During the last few christmases we’ve played a Saran Wrap ball game for the adult kids, being so close to me in age she was always next to me. She’d be hyping me up when it was me against her brother but then when it us going against each other it was no holds bar trash talking. It made me laugh every time. She’d apologize later but I never held it against her. We were both super competitive. I’ll miss her laugh, she could lighten a mood as soon as she stepped into the room. She’d always make sure you knew you were loved. Grabbing me tight and calling me Katy-bugs. She was joy personified.

“ Were do you start with such a beautiful bright star. Alycia is the true definition of a female Tigger from Winnie the Pooh fame. She would come bouncing in a room making it brighter and everyone happier. I remember when she was in high school and said I'm joining the Debate Club. I knew she would do great because she could look at both sides with ease. We took a family trip to Gatlinburg Tennessee when she was 14 years old. They had a slingshot ride and I thought no way am I riding it. She wanted to ride it and they strapped her in, she shot off like a rocket and laughing all the way up and down several times. Some of the hats Alycia wore was baby girl, student, big sissy, hard worker, Bride to be and so many more but her largest hat she wore like a crown was Mommy to two beautiful little girls.
Love you Alycia,
Uncle Garry

“ The world has lost a once in a lifetime gem. We had a lot of fun growing up and you always were the life of the party. Family events will never be the same. Nobody could make a entrance into a room and light it up the way you did my beautiful cousin.

“ One of my favorite memories of Alycia was when she was itty bitty! She was about 3 or 4 years old and I remember going with my Grandma Judy and Aunt Pam to watch her dance recital. She wore a fun sparkle outfit and I remember being so jealous of her dancing and all the attention she received. Alycia had a way of capturing everyone’s attention - with her beaming smile, a witty joke, or being silly.

“ From the first day of 7th grade at Northern Hills. Alycia was always like a sister to me. She loved. So proud and hard. When I was in town in July of 2022 and I saw Alycia it was like we hadn't skipped a beat. She talked so highly of her fiancé Amos and how she has never been loved like this before. And talked so highly of her girls. I was ready to make plans to come to her wedding to attend. Her mom Pam and stepdad Skeeter were like a second set of parents to me. We went through a lot, from break ups, trips to the mall every weekend, concerts. And the list goes on. A beautiful soul was taken from us way too soon.

“ A 30 year friendship cut short, though i'm glad we had those years. Starting sassy together in kindergarten, then throughout the ups and downs of life; moving us in many directions but never apart for long. A beautiful life that had so much more living to do. I thought I would be writing something for your wedding but now sadly, I'm writing here instead. I would have talked about how happy you were with Amos, how many times we talked about how good he was to you, and I find peace knowing that you got to know that type of love with him and your kids before leaving this earth. How often we talked about the girls and you being a mom, and of course I would have reminisced on some funny stories as well, we had many over time. If given the opportunity I will be a part of your girls life, remain a part of your families lives, and keep your memory going strong. And ok, ok, if you insist i'll have a drink or two for you :) because we know you were always trying to get me to have a drink and cut loose with you. I love you forever, best friends for life just like you wrote to me. I will miss you. LYLAS <3
