I got to meet Darrell when he was living at Brewster Place. I considered him a very cherished friend. I sought him out whenever I had free time or after work was over. He was easy to talk to and his mind was sharp to the end. He liked share his thoughts about politics and Jesus. Darrell would always remind you "Jesus loves you and so do I." I remember looking into his eyes and shaking his hand wondering if it might be my last. Darrell was the kind of man that you wanted to be around; he was interesting, thoughtful and a great story teller. One time he invited me into his apartment and said, "Joe, help yourself to an Ensure. They're nice and cold in the refrigerator." HA! I did love him like my own family member and I think of him often. I'm sure he is worshipping God right now with the rest of the Heavenly hosts. Love you, Darrell.

“ Such a kind gentleman! He was one of the first elders I met when I worked at Brewster, and I never passed him in the hall (or at the puzzle table!) without him sharing a friendly hello. My prayers for God's peace for his family....

“ Before Brewster, Darrell lived just down the road from our family farm in Tecumseh where I grew up and my late sister Nina spent most of her retirement. She liked to tell me about the wienie roasts he hosted for the neighborhood. He was a good neighbor to her when she lived at the farm and continued to be a good neighbor after she herself moved into Brewster. They lived in separate areas of the Brewster campus and he often sent her thoughtful notes and cards. When he was able, he also visited her. We were both grateful for his kindness. My parents, aunt and three sisters, all of them now also departed, thought highly of Darrell and so did I. Since his passing, I've been imagining all of them now, gathered around a heavenly backyard campfire--with or without wienies--catching up with each other, sharing stories, laughing and enjoying a good, old-fashioned visit. My heartfelt condolences to Darrell's family and friends.

“ Got to know Darrell while working at Brewster and we became friends. He had great stories, a very sharp mind and memory, a great sense of humor. Very patriotic, proud of his country, and loved his family. Spoke of his beloved wife like he had just seen her yesterday. He was patient, curious and always asked about us. Spoke often of his deep faith and his personal relationship with his Lord and savior. He talked often how blessed he was to have Jack and Joyce in his life. And we were blessed to have him at Brewster. He was one of a kind. Many of us will think of him each time we see a jigsaw puzzle! We will miss him.
