“ *Dear Logan Family,
I have been blessed to work for LBM for 7 short years. It was an honor to have worked and learned from what I think was the best sales person ever! Hal was 100% sold on customer service and employee happiness. Hal was always pushing me to be smarter, care more, learn more, and to always treat people with respect. I will miss seeing you at the office Hal wearing your famous yellow tinted ray bans with some awesome suit and tie! I will forever keep the lessons you taught me in my heart. RIP Papa Hal.*

“ I was in the third grade when my Uncle Hal and his cousin Max (the Logan boys) were seniors on the Quenemo High School team that won the Kansas state championship in class BB basketball. My parents never missed any of those games, and I clearly remember watching the guys play. That team was the pride of our little town at the time, big business around our house, and my first awareness of the thrill of competitive sport. I very much looked up to those guys, and suppose I always will.

Godspeed Uncle Hal, you will be missed.

“ I went to work for uncle Hal as soon as I graduated from college, thought it was going to be a cake walk. Instead I was going door to door cold calling in a suit in the Kansas. Summer dying of heat. Thank you uncle Hal for making me understand what hard work meant and knowing that anything you have in life is earned not given. That work ethic has carried through to not only me but my children. We are better because of you, thank you, we love you, RIP and thanks for the gift you gave but may not have realized the impact you made.
